"Everyone has the right to a standard of living adequate for ... health and well-being"

ARTICLE 25 UDHR

Post-war birth of human rights in global health governance

- Human rights provide a universal framework for advancing global health with justice, transforming moral imperatives into legal entitlements.
- Created out of the atrocities of World War II, states in the newly formed UN established human rights under international law.
- The 1945 UN Charter became the first international treaty to recognize human rights, which form the principal foundation of this new world body.
- Operating through the UN Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC), the UN would “make recommendations for the purpose of promoting respect for, and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all”.

Constitution of the Republic of Turkiye - Article 56

- Everyone has the right to live in a healthy, balanced environment.

It is the duty of the state and citizens to improve the natural environment, and to prevent environmental pollution.

To ensure that everyone leads their lives in conditions of physical and mental health and to secure cooperation in terms of human and material resources through economy and increased productivity, the state shall regulate central planning and functioning of the health services.

- The state shall fulfill this task by utilizing and supervising the health and social assistance institutions, in both public and private sectors.
- In order to establish widespread health services, general health insurance may be introduced by law.

The UDHR Sets a Human Rights Standard for Health

- The UN General Assembly then adopted the 1948 UDHR, enumerating a broad set of fundamental human rights and proclaiming “a common standard of achievement for all peoples and all nations”.
- Drawing from the WHO Constitution, public health became central to the UDHR agenda, with ECOSOC's Commission on Human Rights highlighting the importance of both medical care and underlying determinants of health.
- Reflecting rising national health systems and theories of social medicine,
- The right to health would encompass a holistic / integral vision of patient and population-based health.

The UN Charters Articles for Health

- Peace, dignity and equality on a healthy planet
- Art. 13/b : promoting international co-operation in the economic, social, cultural, educational, and health fields, and assisting in the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.
- Art. 55/b : solutions of international economic, social, health, and related problems; and international cultural & educational cooperation; and

The UN Charters Articles for Health

- Peace, dignity and equality on a healthy planet
- Art. 57/1 :The various specialized agencies, established by intergovernmental agreement and having wide international responsibilities, as defined in their basic instruments, in economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related fields, shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations in accordance with the provisions of Article 63.
- Art. 62/1 : The Economic and Social Council may make or initiate studies and reports with respect to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related matters and may make recommendations with respect to any such matters to the General Assembly to the Members of the United Nations, and to the specialized agencies concerned.

The Right to the Highest Attainable Standards of Health

- The primary objective of Public Health Law is to pursue the highest possible level of physical and mental health in the population, consistent with the values of social justice.

How Does Social Justice Intersect With Public Health?

- “There are so many things we can do within public health that advance social justice,” explains Dr. Maniar.
- “It’s about making sure that we train a public health workforce that sees social justice in every aspect of public health.
Without justice in all aspects of our lives, we can never attain the highest levels of health we should be able to attain.»

How Does Social Justice Intersect With Public Health?

- ❑ We seek to capture all the forces that influence health in different ways.
- ❑ When we think about the social determinants of health, this involves the conditions in which an individual lives, works, plays, and goes to school.
- ❑ When we think about housing, for inst., that hasn't always been viewed as directly related to health care, but the stressors of having poor access to housing has a profound impact on health."

The Right to the Highest Attainable Standards of Health

- Constitution of the WHO : Principles

1. Health is a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity.

2. The enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of health is one of the fundamental rights of every human being without distinction of race, religion, political belief, economic or social condition.

Public Health for Social Justice

- The GAP lays out the vision of a world free of the avoidable burden of NCDs with the goal of reducing the preventable and avoidable burden of morbidity, mortality, and disability due to non-communicable diseases.
- The means of achievement will be thorough multi-sectoral collaboration and cooperation at national, regional, and global levels.

(Ref. Oxford Textbook of Public Health, p. 1548)

Public Health for Social Justice

- The objective is for populations to reach the highest attainable standards of health and productivity at every age so that NCDs are no longer a barrier to well-being or socio-economic development (WHO 2013b).
- The principles adopted should be;..

The relationship between health and income

Better health

- allows people to gain and sustain employment
- can reduce the costs people face from ill-health
- allows people to have more options, such as a more active life.

Higher income

- means people face fewer stresses
- allows people to meet more of their needs
- can be spent on health-promoting assets, such as better-quality housing or food.

❑ The conceptual framework of Almaty was further developed by the Ottawa Charter (WHO 1986), which promoted the concept of healthy public policy rather than focusing only on health policy, extending consideration of health to all policy environments, including the concept of health impact assessment.

❑ The Ottawa Charter defined 5 key areas for strategic public health action:

1. Building healthy public policy.
2. Creating supportive environments.
3. Strengthening community action.
4. Developing personal skills.
5. Reorienting health services towards prevention and a holistic (integrative) approach (WHO 1986).

Creating health equity

- Creating health equity is a guiding priority and core value of APHA.
- By health equity, we mean everyone has the opportunity to attain their highest level of health.
- Inequities are created when barriers prevent individuals and communities from accessing these conditions and reaching their full potential.
- Inequities differ from health disparities, which are differences in health status between people related to social or demographic factors such as race, gender, income or geographic region.
- Health disparities are one way we can measure our progress toward achieving health equity.

How do we achieve health equity?

- We value all people equally.
- We optimize the conditions in which people are born, grow, live, work, learn and age.
- We work with other sectors to address the factors that influence health, including employment, housing, education, health care, public safety and food access.<sup>1</sup>
- We name racism as a force in determining how these social determinants are distributed.

Better Health Through Equity:

Case Studies in Reframing Public Health Work (2015)

- This report by APHA highlights state and local efforts from health agencies and one Tribal Nation across Colorado, Oregon, Texas, Virginia and Wisconsin to address the root causes of health inequities.
- Those root causes include racism and unequal distribution and access to resources such as a living wage, health care and quality education and housing.
- The report features the stories of the health agencies as they shifted their thinking and their work from focusing on health disparities to advancing health equity.

DYNAMICS of HUMAN RIGHTS & HUMAN HEALTH : As UNSEPARABLE CONCEPTIONS

Public Health & Human Rights

- ❑ Although the fields of health equity and human rights have different languages, perspectives and methodologies, they share a number of fundamental concepts and tools for study and action.
- ❑ Evidence from Social Epidemiology showing that socioeconomic conditions (e.g. poverty, unemployment, homelessness, education) are among the strongest determinants of health overlap with the human rights literature that focuses on the role of both socioeconomic rights (e.g. access to a decent standard of living, housing, education, healthcare, housing, water and sanitation) as well as civil and political rights (e.g. the right to collective bargaining, political participation and non-discrimination).

Public Health & Human Rights

- ❑ Social justice and equity lie at the heart of both human rights and public health.
- ❑ The social and economic circumstances in which we are born, live and work play a key role in the protection and advancement of human rights and health.
- ❑ A growing body of evidence also indicates that human rights are plausible mechanisms to explain why more egalitarian societies have better health and psychosocial outcomes than more unequal ones.
- ❑ By emphasizing a trans-disciplinary approach, this panel aims at quantitative and qualitative analyses of the impact of public policies, social conditions, and social justice on health, equity and human rights as well as theoretical contributions on the interrelationships between public health and human rights.

The UDHR Sets a Human Rights Standard for Health

- It is more important than ever for the health and human rights communities to stand together as partners to uphold the values of the UDHR and resist contemporary threats to human rights.
- The human rights progress of the past, bringing together top-down leadership in global health governance with bottom-up civil society advocacy, highlights the importance of sustained political engagement to realise the right to health.
- Health practitioners have a crucial role in this political engagement, advancing rights-based public health policies, programmes, and practices that are essential to secure the future of human rights in global health.
